City to City FAD Award: Water and City

16 Mar. 2018

The 10th edition of the City to City FAD Award 2018 addresses the binomial “Water and City” with the goal of generating reflections around this element, fundamental for human life and inherent in the very birth of civilization and urban settlements.

The eligible projects will be those developed in a city that places water in the center of its proposal and help improve urban life from a very broad perspective that includes architecture, urban planning, design, engineering, pedagogy, art, etc. The call for candidatures was open until March 2nd but the deadline has been extended until 16th March.

If you wish to submit your projects, please visit the fad.cat/citytocity. Don't forget to check previously the terms and conditions.

About City to City

Today, more than half of the world's population lives in cities and therefore finding solutions to the great challenges posed by urban life is a fundamental task for our future. Understanding this, City to City Barcelona FAD Award is a platform that aims to track, reward and connect initiatives from all over the world that contribute to the improvement of life in urban territories.
