MITI background

Metropolis has been working closely with its members, international partners and urban institutions in identifying the focus areas for global cities to collaborate, exchange and developing mutual learning platforms. Since 1996, the international training and capacity building programs of Metropolis have been highly recognised and demanded by major cities of the world, initially from Asia, Africa and Latin America.

In 2008, Metropolis followed the strategic vision of advancing its training and capacity building programs to include wider stakeholders of member cities and partner organisations.

In 2012, at the Metropolis annual meeting in Guangzhou, the Board of Directors accepted the application of the city of Seoul to take the responsibilities of international training headquarters and work in conjunction with the cities of Cairo, Mashhad, Mexico City and Paris Île-de-France, aligned with the Metropolis Secretariat in Barcelona, in promoting the Metropolis training programs and working with other member cities.

In May 2013, the honourable mayor of Seoul, Mr Park Won Soon, took the global leadership of hosting the Metropolis International Training Institute headquarters in Seoul, through the signature of a MoU with the Metropolis Secretary General.
