The Circular Economy is a new economic model, which aims to transform the production and consumption patterns of society to achieve a sustainable production system. Therefore, it is proposed to reuse the goods that today are considered waste to achieve a more efficient use of resources. In this way, waste can be converted into raw materials that re-enter the production system and then generate a new good, that is, closing the life cycle of goods, lengthening the useful time of resources and reducing waste through its recovery and regeneration.

The World Summit on Circular Economy is a meeting point for companies, entrepreneurs, startups, local governments, academics, referents and experts in the Circular Economy. The main purpose of the meeting is to share, generate and articulate new business models, environmental policies, programs, recycling plans, alliances and new industrial symbiosis, generation of new green and inclusive jobs, access to financing, innovation and technological development, among others topics related to the Circular Economy.
